Dear Harold,

I've been kind of busy up here with one thing and another, so I haven't had time to write back to you since I got your letter. I don't think I'll be able to get down to see you until probably the first part of May the way it looks now, or~~x~~ perhaps the last weekend in April. However, I'd just take a run down for the day, rather than staying overnight or anything like that.

As for how I want to use the material -- since I ~~k~~ didn't mention it to you I couldn't expect you to know -- it's not for anything in a small publication -- I'm working on a very large novel and mostly I need that material for background for one particular segment -- however, I don't expect to be up to that segment until at least the end of the year, so there's no rush on it.

Did you see anything down there on the fellow from Greensburg who's ~~k~~ suing the CIA to get them to disclose their ~~p~~ budget? He apparently is a former employee of theirs or some thing -- I have one or two articles that were published around here if you didn't get much news about it there I'll send you copies of them.

Yes, I do have a car -- so I'd expect that maybe I could drive down on a Saturday or Sunday morning, maybe bring some dinner along for all of us, and then come back that night -- Saturday would be better.

Russ
